Washington, D. C., August 25.—The Senate met at 10 A. M.

The resolution heretofore offered by Mr. Plumb to prohibit the sale of spirituous liquors, vinous liquors, or malt liquors in the Schate wing of the Capitol was taken up, but in the absence of Messrs. Blair and Butler, who had offered amendments, it went over until to-morrow.

The tariff bill was then taken up.

THE TABLEF VOTE.

The tariff bill was then taken up.

THE TABLEF VOTE.

Mr. Addrich referred to the unusual length of the discussion that has taken place on the tariff bill, and said that that the business of the country was in a state of anxious suspense awaiting the result of the Senate's deliberation, led him to ask senaters on the other side to consider the unestion of fixing a date for closing the debate and for having a final vote on the pussage of the bill. He made this suggestion not for the purpose of preventing ample discussion upon the remaining paragraphs of the bill, but because he believed that the orderly disposition of public business as well as the convenience of senators required an arrangement of that kind. He would be glad to hear from senators on the other side if they had any proposition to make in that regard.

Mr. Gorman sand it had been the honored custom of the Senate on all revenue neasures and legislation necessary for the conduct of the Government that after full and free discussion the Senate came to some agreement as to the time for taking a vote. That custom had always enabled the Senate's rule for unlimited debate, but there always strived a time when an agreement as to the time for taking a vote. That custom had always enabled the Senate's rule for unlimited debate, but there always arrived a time when an agreement as to the time for taking a vote. There had been heretofore a demonstration of the wisdom of the Senate's rule for unlimited debate, but there always arrived a time when an agreement as to the time for taking a vote. The truth of the discussion the senate came to discusse fairly and freely all the Senate's rule for unlimited debate, but there always arrived a time when an agreement as to the time for taking a vote. That custom had always enabled the Senate's rule for unlimited debate, but there always arrived a time when an agree when he said that they would be very glad if the Senator in charge of the bill had any suggestion to make that how only thing in it for the benefit of the gr or on this side think that the time proposed is not sufficient, to consent to a reasonable extension.

Mr. Gorman: I am aware that in the consideration of this bill we have spent twenty-four days, and that the long hours of daily sittings—from 10 till 6—have taxed us all to an extent that has not been beneficial to health, at all events, and have possibly delayed somewhat the progress of the bill. I propose that the bill and the conference reports to and including September 1st be subject to general debate, and during September 2d, 3d, and 4th subject to the five-minute rule in debate; that no senator shall speak on any one question more than once, and that September 3th and thereafter consideration shall be continued on the bill or amendments without debate to and including the third reading, when three hours shall be allowed to each side for general debate and a final vote shall be taken on its passage.

Mr. Cullom: On what date is the final vote to be taken? This tariff bill in the past week has been considered a greater number of bours and it has filled a greater number of columns of the Record than any previous measure of the kind. But there were spaced by the state of the columns of the Record than any previous measure of the kind.

Mr. Plumb objected and asked to have the matter go over till te-merrow. It seemed to him that the time fixed was too short. At all events there should be some other division of time, although he was

TARIFF QUESTIONS DELICATE.

The fact was, these were all very delicate questions, and while he himself was perfectly willing to allow the status established by the tariff of 1883 to remain, expenses the status of 1885 to remain, expenses to the status of 1885 to remain expense all along the line in the pending bill, the effect of which would be, in his judgment, to hurt as many American industries as they would help. The pending paragraph was one of these cases. A member of the present Congress to whom he had spoken as to the people becoming restive under the high duties proposed had said to him that that might be so for a time, but they would get used to it. That might be, Mr. Flumb said. There was no back so weak, perhaps, that it would not bear a

New York, August 25.—The present trouble between the brick manufacturers and the building trades unions in this city. Brooklyn, and Jersey City bids fair to be of a decidedly serious character. From present indications it is said to be a matter of only about two days before the entire building operations in the three cities must stop, and fully, if not more than 100,000 workmen will be forced out of employment. The manufacturers state that they have received word from Philadelphia that the brickmakers there have agreed to support them and not to ship bricks to New York.

that the excellent drinking water that we get from Lake Erie is full of the liveliest kind of little wrigglers that you gulp down by the thousands without ever suspecting that you are drinking anything but the purest liquid? But to return to the cheese. Somebody has been taking the census of a piece of cheese and gives us the result in round numbers. He finds the population of Emmenthal, a sort of Gruyere, to be as follows: In each gramme of the cheese, when fresh, from 20,000 to 140,000 microbes are found. This number increases with time. A cheese seventy-one days old contains 800,000 bacteria per gramme. A soft cheese twenty-five days old and much denser than the preceding has 1,200,000, and a cheese forty-five days old 2,000,000 microbes per gramme. The centre is freer than the outside. A cheese near the periphery has from 3,600,000 to 5,600,000 microbes. According to the mean of these two figures there are as many hving organisms in 360 grammes of such a cheese as there are people upon the earth. However, don't let these figures disturb you. Keep right on eating cheese just as you always have.
